I purchased this book since I have both a 1959 G38 1-ton Apache Panel and a 1985 C-10 1/2-ton Silverado Pickup. A great reference if you want to know more about the production year of your vehicle. Will list the various models produced that year along with engines available, etc. and all Regular Production Order (RPO) codes (and cost) for various options available that year. Also the last 40 pages covers, Chevy truck milestones, pricing guide and other data of interest to both the collector/prospective buyer and enthusiast. Also, numerous BW photographs give you a look at some of the various paint schemes available in a given year, as well as which items were chromed and which were painted (especially in older vehicles where chromed bumpers and front/rear treatments were not "automatic"). Though I have nothing from my '59's early history, I was able to authenticate via the RPO codes that the drive train (engine through rear end) is not original, while almost everything else still is. While all I had from the '85 C-10 were the RPO sheet (still intact inside the glove compartment door) I was able to document that the truck has undergone a quality partial repaint (to give it a two-tone look) in its past, but was otherwise original and up to standard for an '85 "Silverado." I also found out from the section in the back of the book that my '85's approximate value is about $1800 based on its condition being between Good and Very Good condition (which make me happy since I was given the truck for the cost of driving it away, by a cousin who didn't want it - belonged to his dad he's a "Ford Man"). I also found out from the Milestones section that the first Suburban debuted in 1935 (True - check it out on page 246). This would seem to me to be a great candidate book for someone to revise and update from 1996 forward, but what do I know. If you're a Chevy Truck person, this one would be a good addition to your Chevy Library!
